Interest Income

Remember every living human being has an amount of Personal allowance of £8,105. In theory if your money in the bank is in the name of a person who has not used his Personal allowance, for

Investment Dividends Income (Dividends from PLC's)

If you are a 40% or higher Tax Payer, you will pay a further 22.5% or more Tax on your dividend income when you submit your personal Self Assessment Tax Return.

If however these shares belonged to your spouse or children or dependants who are not 40% Tax Payers, you will save this tax. For every £1 dividend you actually receive you will save at least 25p.

40% or Higher Tax.....Your own company dividends

If your income crosses the 40% slab, you will pay a further ... at least 22.5% Tax on every £1 dividend you take over this slab

You may not need the money for your day to day activities. You should therefore seriously consider what dividend you actually need to take once you reach the 40% slab.

Every £1 is actually costing you £1.25 or more.

Instead of taking dividends, consider short term borrowing from your own company. This will cost you nothing as long as you do not owe your company any monies 9 months from Year End

Alternatively borrow money from your Bank or Building Society

Remember, for every £10,000 dividends, over 40% or higher Tax slab, is actually costing you £2,500 or more Whereas £10,000 borrowed at 5% a year will cost you only £500.

Higher Salaries - From own Limited Company

Being a major shareholder & Director, you need to consider what salary you take on as remuneration.

You should aim that you do not take a salary higher than around £7,605 p.a. in the Tax year as you will be paying Employer NIC and Employee NIC on the income above this level. Yet as long as your salary is above the basic threshold of £5,564 your Pension rights will be preserved.

Salary was used to get regular monthly income for cash flow & for Pension contributions.

In today's world dividends can be made regularly & your Pension contributions are no longer linked with salary.

Reduce your Tax liability. Take minimum salary & rest as Dividends.

Remember all you have to do is to just select an option and we will take care of all paper work.
